MY CHILD IS NOT MEETING THEIR DEVELOPMENTAL MILESTONES

All children develop differently depending on their environment and other factors, however, not reaching milestones can be a sign of a developmental delay.

Early intervention support with Interconnect can help to teach caregivers how to play and interact with their children to create a learning environment that fosters child development and an increase of cognitive, behavior, communication, social and life skills.

MY CHILD HAS A DIFFICULT TIME MAKING CONNECTIONS AND KEEPING FRIENDS

Sometimes children need a little extra support to learn how others' think and feel; interacting with those around you isn't always instinctual.

Listening to others' and communicating, respecting personal space, cooperating and problem-solving, exhibiting empathy and advocating for oneself are a few key social skills that can be taught through social groups and parent-led play-based therapy with Interconnect.

MY CHILD HAS BEHAVIOR CHALLENGES AND WON'T LISTEN

Behavioral issues are common among children as they learn to navigate life and find their independence and opinions. Sometimes, the behaviors become difficult to navigate and caregivers need support.

Parent coaching helps caregivers to understand the cause for the behaviors; why they exist and how to reduce them. Uniquely-tailored treatment plans are developed to help the child and caregivers to decrease behaviors and increase communication using evidence-based therapy practices.
